1. Introduction

Bali Jatra, meaning "Journey to Bali," is one of India's largest open-air fairs and a unique festival that celebrates Odisha's seafaring legacy. Every year, during the auspicious occasion of Kartik Purnima (the full moon in the Hindu month of Kartik), thousands gather along the banks of the Mahanadi River in Cuttack to relive and honor the glorious days when Odia sailors embarked on long sea voyages to Southeast Asia for trade and cultural exchange. This festival is a colorful confluence of history, culture, and tradition, making it a significant part of Odisha's identity.

This article delves into the origins, historical context, cultural festivities, and contemporary significance of Bali Jatra, showcasing it as a symbol of Odisha's maritime pride and heritage.

2. The Historical Context of Bali Jatra

Odisha's connection to maritime trade dates back to ancient times, with archaeological evidence suggesting that the region engaged in flourishing trade with Southeast Asia over 2,000 years ago. The Sadhabas, or traditional Odia sailors, would set sail on massive wooden ships called *Boitas*. These vessels carried goods such as textiles, spices, ivory, and precious stones to distant lands, including Bali, Java, and Sumatra.

The timing of these voyages was dictated by favorable wind conditions, which occurred during the Kartik Purnima period. This annual tradition not only facilitated trade but also fostered cultural and religious exchanges, leaving a lasting impact on Southeast Asian societies. Many of these interactions are evident in shared art forms, temple architecture, and Hindu-Buddhist traditions.

3. Significance of Kartik Purnima

Kartik Purnima holds immense spiritual and cultural importance in Odisha. It is believed that on this day, Lord Jagannath, an incarnation of Lord Vishnu, grants special blessings to his devotees. The ritual of *Boita Bandana*, where people float miniature boats made of banana stems, paper, or cork in rivers and ponds, symbolizes the Sadhabas' voyages and honors their bravery and enterprise. The floating of these miniature boats is accompanied by chants of "Aa ka ma boi, pan gua thoi," a traditional Odia song celebrating the maritime spirit.
