Dr. Omkar Prasad Baidya is an Indian author, physician, philosopher and medical researcher. He has written several books on morality, universal ethics, world peace and human virtues. He has written and published various books on moral philosophy, world peace, universal ethics, and morality. His books have brought attention to the importance of human virtues in shaping lives and solving all human problems. He envisions bringing philanthropic change in the world via moral leadership. In his book "A Path to World Peace," Dr. Baidya has shown that how human virtues play a crucial role in shaping civilization and human lives. He also suggests that universal religion can play a significant role in establishing peace worldwide. According to Baidya, human virtues like compassion, forgiveness, and nonviolence can form three pillars of world peace. In another book on morality, 'Morality beyond human brain', Dr Baidya introduces a new concept and theory of morality, present in all living cells, which is important for the survival and existence of life on this planet and beyond. He presents a mathematical model and equation for intrinsic morality, which nature has given to all living creatures to win over the struggle for existence. Baidya has shown that both morality and immorality are essential for our living on earth, and human extrinsic morality can be acquired through moral education, moral philosophy, and human values. He believes that world peace is a function of human morality. In his 'nature and morality' book, Baidya emphasizes the existence of God as a moral planner of the cosmic world. As a physician with a desire for a peaceful world, he has inclined himself towards moral philosophy along with physiology and medical streams. He also received many national and international awards like Dr BR Ambedkar national awards, Mahatma Gandhi Nobel peace award etc.
